As an entrepreneur and investor, I prioritize construction and collaboration. Whether it's a five-person start-up or a global giant, the companies that are most productive are the ones whose employees operate with a shared sense of purpose and a clear set of policies for responding to changing conditions and new opportunities.

Small Business May Get Big Help in The $2 Trillion Stimulus Bill

Most companies with under 500 workers, including the self-employed, will get their costs covered for eight weeks by the government if they keep workers on the payroll, U.S. Rep. Raja Krishnamoorthi says. What happens after that?

That $2.2 trillion federal stimulus bill does a lot more for small business than many people realize, at least for the first eight weeks of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Krishnamoorthi said the bill specifically carves out $377 billion available to almost any small business—defined as a company with fewer than 500 employees, plus nonprofits, sole proprietorships and self-employed individuals. All are entitled to loans equal to two and a half times their costs over an eight-week period. Costs include rent, health insurance and, most important, payroll for workers, including tips.

Those loans will become grants if the business continues to pay its costs, he said. With payroll the biggest cost for most firms, operators will have a big incentive to keep their workers on, converting the loan into a grant, Krishnamoorthi said.

Loans technically will be through the U.S. Small Business Administration but will be administered by local financial institutions, including credit unions, Krishnamoorthi said. That's deliberate. "We want people to keep their business running."

Krishnamoorthi said additional funds almost certainly will be needed in another stimulus bill later this spring. "We're probably going to have to do more," he said. "Our economy has gone in a medically induced coma, and we're going to have to pull it out of it."

The later stimulus bill also will need to further extend unemployment benefits for those who have lost their jobs because of the pandemic, include more help for state and local governments whose tax receipts have dried up, and possibly have an infrastructure component, Krishnamoorthi said.

Illinois and local governments combined will get about $5 billion out of the stimulus bill, Krishnamoorthi said, with the city of Chicago alone in line for an estimated $600 million to $1 billion. But though officials here have not yet given detailed projections, outside financial watchdogs say much more ultimately may be needed.

The costs eligible to be covered via borrowing are based on average payroll over the 12 months preceding the pandemic. Covered salary is limited to those making no more than $100,000 a year. The total loan is capped at $10 million per enterprise—each location is considered separate, even for big chains, according to industry trade groups—but there is no requirement for the recipient to post collateral or make a personal guarantee.

For even more details, check with the Small Business Administration or, even better, your WIBA Member financial institution, most of which will be able to directly make the loans.
